

THE NEWS.

John Morgan is having rather a warm time in Kentucky if we may believe the reports. He has been overtaken and whipped several times, and his force "scattered in all directions." They seem to stand scattering remarkably well.

The Raleigh Confederate says that 6,000 of our prisoners have passed through Danville on their way to the rebel dungeons in the South.

The latest news from Grant is up to yesterday, when movements were going on successfully, although what the movements were we are not informed. It is said Grant has effected a change of base to James River. This is highly important if true and indicates more of that strategy on the part of Grant that has so far out-generaled and circumvented General Lee.

There is nothing important from Sherman. His entire losses are set down in our afternoon dispatches at 10,000, mostly slightly wounded, and it is stated that he has been reinforced so that his losses are more than made up, leaving his army as strong to day as when he commenced his campaign.

The capture of Fort Darling has not been confirmed.

Several hundred delegates to the Sabbath School Convention have already arrived here from different parts of the State. It now bids fair to be one of the largest ever held in Wisconsin.

DISASTROUS TRAGEDY.—The Mineral Point Tribune relates a most heart-rending tragedy which occurred in the town of Highland on Saturday morning last, the particulars of which we learn as follows: Mr. Wm. Phillips, who had shown symptoms of insanity, left the house of a neighbor, where he had been at work, on Friday night, saying that he must go and see to his children, as one of them was very sick. He wandered about till near daylight, when he entered his house so ill; as not to disturb his wife, who was asleep, took two of his little boys, aged some six and eight years, from their beds, and took them to the creek near by, threw them both in, where both were drowned.

His wife heard the screams of the little boys and hastened to the spot, but could not rescue her children. She ran to a neighbor, about a quarter of a mile for help, but it was too late to save the children—both were drowned. While his wife was absent, Phillips went to the house and took a third child, an infant, and made off with it. He eluded pursuit, carrying the child until near night, when finding himself pursued, he left the child and fled, and at last account he had not been taken. This is one of the most heart-rending cases we have had to record for many a day. Mr. P. is evidently insane, as he is a kind hearted man when rational.

The Masonic body of Paris was informed at its last meeting that the emperor restored to it the traditional right of electing its grand master. This announcement was received with enthusiastic applause, and Marshal Magann, who held his nomination by imperial decree, was unanimously re-elected by the delegates at all the lodges present.

THE OLDEST SOLDIER in the service of Uncle Sam is Corporal Bonner of Lisbon, Waukesha county, and is a member of Col. Buttrick's 30th regiment. He enlisted for 58, but is really 78. He walked out home on Sunday and back on Monday, making 50 miles in two days. He thinks he can wear out some young men on a march.

A FORTRESS MONROE letter in the Boston Herald says that during a rebel attack on Gen. Butler's rifle pits on the 24 inst., nearly all of two companies of the 7th Connecticut regiment, armed with the Spencer repeating rifle were taken prisoners.

THE REASON WHY.—One reason given for Fremont's silly letter of acceptance, is that his wife, who is the smartest man of the two, was absent from home at the time. Had "Jessie" been there she never would have permitted it.

THE PENNSYLVANIA RESERVES were originally, three years ago, fifteen thousand strong. They returned on Monday the 6th instant to the Capital, Harrisburg, fifteen hundred strong. One in ten.

JEFFERSON said he would rather live in a country that had newspapers and no government, than in a country that had a government and no newspapers.

THE LONDON TIMES says that there has been no such fighting in the history of the human race as that between Grant and Lee in Virginia.

COL. LYON.—A Bridgeport, (Ala.) letter in the Louisville Journal says: "Colonel Lyon, of the 13th Wisconsin, is the present commander of the post, a very efficient and gentlemanly officer, and one very much liked by everybody. Col. Lyon possesses the singular faculty of imagining himself an officer in command of the post, and not a little god with shoulder straps. For this reason all his intercourse with the world at large is characterized by common sense, which is saying a good deal."

MIL & PRAIRIE DU CHIEN RAILWAY.—The annual election of stockholders of this company was held yesterday in this city. The following are the board of directors elected: L. H. Meyer, William P. Lynde, Allen Campbell, W. Schell, John Castlin, Charles F. Hiley, G. M. Harwood, H. L. Douglass, Louis A. Van Hoffman.

HIGHEST PRICES paid in cash for old iron at the Rock River Iron Works.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

TO MERCHANTS, MILLERS AND OTHER SHIPPERS.—I am now prepared to make season contracts for Lake Insurance in the old companies at best rates.

E. L. DIMOCK, Agent.

April 22nd/57

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

VOLUME 8.

JANESVILLE, WIS., TUESDAY, JUNE 14, 1864.

NUMBER 91.

Sherman's Position.

A Nashville date of the 8th says: Gen. Sherman has finally given us a brief telegram relating to the situation at the front, which has doubtless reached you long ere this; but it will be seen that it does not materially vary from the information conveyed to you in my letter of last week: He holds the railroad safely in the vicinity of Marietta, and I suppose will not advance beyond that town for some days. There are certain movements in progress, which are designed to entrap Johnston's army, and these will consume considerable time. Besides, reinforcements are passing through here to join our army at the front; and Gen. Sherman will almost certainly await these, as he is determined to crush the rebel forces in Georgia; nothing short than a decisive victory will satisfy him. He has seen the folly of fighting for territory—of giving battle when the army, after the carnage, will stand relatively as before the firing of the first shot.

The bridge across the river at Kingston, Georgia, is now nearly completed, and cars will soon be running to the front. Telegraphic communication is already open to Sherman's headquarters. Large shipments of supplies are constantly being sent from this point to Kingston, by both the Decatur and the Chattanooga railroads.

The Draft.

The President has transmitted to Congress communications from Secretary Stanton and Provost Marshal General Fry, asking Congress to repeal the $300 commutation clause in the conscription bill, as absolutely necessary to enable the Government to obtain men. The President endorses the recommendation. The Senate have already given indications to acceding to the request, and no doubt the House will also. The Senate proposes also to limit the term of service under the draft to one year, which the House will probably accede to. The indications now are pretty certain that the conscription bill will be amended to make the term of service one year, and to repeal the $300 commutation clause.

A Mistake Corrected.

CLINTON, June 10, 1864. EDS. GAZETTE:—A little article headed "Clinton" and taken from the Wisconsin Chief, by being placed in your local column, has led many to suppose that Mr. Brown referred to Clinton in Rock Co, but such is not the case, as Clinton has not been cursed with grog shops, nor does the Lodge encounter many obstacles. I think its friends are well satisfied with the encouragement given it, and point with some pride to the practical good having been done. Further, if Mr. Brown had made a temperance talk in our village, I could find some one who had heard of it. He evidently refers to some other Clinton. There is a village of that name in Dane Co., which may be the one. At any rate, we have enough to do to excuse even tolerably, all the short comings of our village without being mixed into a whiskey punch by an evident mistake.

Respectfully, CLINTON.

[When we copied the article we did suppose that the Clinton alluded to was in this county. We thank our friend for making the correction.—Eos. GAZETTE.]

PLUCK.—Capt. Fred. A. Cummings, company M, 18th Maine, was struck on his side by a musket bullet in the battle of Spotsylvania. Luckily a thick double-breasted watch occupied his pocket at the precise spot where the shot hit him; it was shattered to fragments, and Capt. C. was knocked down and rendered senseless, in which condition he was borne from the field; but he soon recovered his senses, and as he was injured only by the shock, he rallied, and immediately returned to the battle-field and fought five hours. He is only 23 years of age, and had never been in a fight before.

SPANISH OUTRAGE IN PERU.—Throughout South America the greatest excitement prevails in consequence of the invasion of Peruvian Territory by Spain. In Peru a very large force of volunteers is being organized, and it is expected that soon the 100,000 will be ready to respond to the first call of the President. In Chili mass meetings have been held in all the large towns, calling upon the Government to support Peru. At Panama, the Spanish Commissioner, while staying in the house of the French Consul, has been mobbed.

Some of the abolition papers seem to devote their whole attention to the Louisville Journal.—Louisville Journal.

If the "abolition papers" had not devoted their whole attention to the Louisville Journal, financially speaking, some three years ago, the Louisville Journal would now be where it ought to be—gone up. Shame on the ungrateful paper!—Chicago Journal.

A GOOD THING is said of Gen. Joe Johnston. A Georgia militia officer, somewhat indignant that Johnston kept retreating, asked him why he did not stand and fight Sherman. Johnston wanted to know "how the d—d I can give him battle, when I can't find either of his flanks?"

TO MERCHANTS, MILLERS AND OTHER SHIPPERS.—I am now prepared to make season contracts for Lake Insurance in the old companies at best rates.

E. L. DIMOCK, Agent.

April 22nd/57

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

MARRIED. In this city, June 13th, by Rev. J. H. Jones, Mr. OSCAR STEARNS, of Johnston.

SODA WATER.—Cold, sparkling and delicious! at the Philadelphia Drug Store, may 23rd/57.

LOCAL MATTERS.

RAILROAD DIRECTORY.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago & Northwestern.

From Chicago.	ARRIVE.	GOING SOUTH.	DEPART.
"	9:50 A M	"	7:00 A M
"	2:00 A M	"	4:20 P M
Fr. Howard...	4:15 P M	North....	2:10 "
"	12:30 A M	"	2:05 A M

Mil. & Prairie du Chien.

It was therefore a relief for me to see my friend D. G. in the crowd. He used to be a business in that region, some years ago, and knows all about it; so I asked him what was the matter.

"There's been a panic," said he, "and the street hasn't got over it yet. Stocks have been knocked higher than a burnt boot!"

This eccentric statement explained to me the crowd, the feverish conversation, the eagerness of the atmosphere. Men who had been rich at breakfast time are penniless now. Men who had been penniless are suddenly rich. The juggernaut wheel of fortune had made a grand revolution, and many lame ducks were crawling from beneath its inexorable tide.

"Are you going into the outside board?" asked D. G.

As I was an outsider, I thought this must be my proper place whence to seek what a stock market is.

"You can't get in without some endorsement or authority," said D. G., but I guess I can get in on admission."

I asked him to do so, and he did. He procured a slip of paper, whereon was written a date, and a request to "admit the bearer and oblige." A tolerably well-known firm, D. G. told me that the man who gave him that paper, a moment after "I" that check for one hundred dollars had been "given out yet." The boy appeared to answer, "No, but that the note for sixty thousand dollars" had "just come in."

I, who do not believe in such sums generally, fancied the conversation to be improvised for the purpose of conveying an air of responsibility, on the part of the firm, to my friend. Possibly, these people wanted to borrow a dollar from him. Subsequently, I learned that this firm does a business involving millions.

Very few people know what is going on in the stock market region every day. I, for one, had not imagined anything like it. I had fancied that there were excited groups in Wall street, but I was wrong. William street is the centre of financial delusions, and the outside board, "as it is called, in contradistinction to the "regular board" is the very Babel and pandemonium of finance.

At three o'clock P. M., or thereabout, I entered the room where this pandemonium is daily held. The door-keeper took my pass and scrutinized it.

"That is good, isn't it?" I asked, innocently. He laughed, and turned to the next comer. The signature of a firm worth millions is rarely questioned in William street.

The room was large, dusky, dirty, and crowded. Plain wooden seats were arranged in a semi-circle—precisely like the benches of a concert saloon—around a place like a pulpit. In this stood an old gentleman, with grey hairs and whiskers, holding in one hand a ponderous mallet of rosewood, and in the other a bass drumstick. Behind him hung a small gong, and beside him sat a strange-looking, skeleton-like young man, with long hair and an account book.

The benches were full of men, all with their hats on, all anxious of expression. Rather a good-looking set generally, but with hideous exceptions. A vast number of them bore unmistakable traces of Hebrew origin. All those persons were anxiously looking at once, and the din of voices was unutterable. Several arose simultaneously in different places, and pointing at each other, radiantly, and shouting phrases that sounded like insults. I thought for a time that a free fight must inevitably result, till I found that they were merely trying to buy or sell stocks.

I cannot begin to repeat the mysterious formulae they uttered. It was all Greek to me, and worse. The main object seemed to be an increase of the confusion already reigning, and when ten or fifteen persons, young and old, Jew and Gentile, got to the highest pitch of their voices, yelling themselves purple in the face, the old gentleman in the pulpit added to the demoniac roar by beating studiously upon his gong with the drumstick, and his counter with the gong, crying "Order! Order, gentlemen!" as loud as any of them.

In the course of my varied studies of the human mind, and various excitements, I have penetrated to those unhallowed chambers devoted to the joyous but extensive games of faro and roulette. Likewise have I witnessed the playing of brag and poker, upon the turbid bosom of the Mississippi; but nowhere have I seen card gamblers who would for a moment have tolerated the undignified, the insane, the graceless and avaricious confusion that characterized this meeting of the outside board of stock brokers. With my idea of down-town business had been associated with some notions of respectability and quiet importance; but such notions are scattered forever. I can only remember this scene as a type of bedlamite financial debauchery, and flammy irretrievable. I instinctively buttoned my pockets—a somewhat needless precaution, perhaps, but an unscrutable avowal permeated the atmosphere, and I had vague fears of losing the coat off my back, my hat, my boots, my senses, anything and everything that I might possess.

There were many boys present, of ages from fourteen to twenty. Some of these bought and sold heavily, exhausting their shrill treble voices to a degree of hoarseness quite painful. Most of the youngsters, however, contented themselves with taking notes of the fluctuation in price of different stocks. Such were probably sent there by their employers for the purpose. I was told that they often acquire great skill in judging the market thus, and come out strong as brokers on their own account ere long. One such, known as "Little Charlie," was pointed out to me as knowing far more about stocks than his own players, of the firm of G. B. & Co.

The noise was so varied, and I do not see for the life of me, this sort of a thing can be endured more than a year without fatal results. I would not pursue it longer without some surer way of gaining a larger fortune than the majority ever gain. I passed out, then, only to find a still denser, noisier crowd surrounding the door steps. Men were darting in for a moment and returning with new quotations from the sales inside which they were offered stentoriously, offering to buy or sell to the thorough-bred—unhappy wretches who had not the key to those mysterious portals.

Trying to wedge my way through this,

THE GAMBLES' CARNIVAL.

[From the Round Table.]

One pleasant Saturday afternoon, I happened to be in William street, Exchange Place. There was a tremendous crowd there, and everybody seemed greatly excited. Large numbers of elegantly-dressed young gentlemen conversed feverishly on the curbside, and semi-respectable-looking old persons of the kind first called "buffs," but now called "bustards," stood with their hands in their pockets, and their eyes fixed on the street. Small boys with portfolios and case-books darted hither and thither. Sassy men, with nothing in their pockets save their hands, stood about listening to the talk of others with an eager dropping air. The atmosphere was charged with a magnetic equality quite new to me, and I was forcibly impressed with a sense that something had happened.

It was therefore a relief for me to see my friend D. G. in the crowd. He used to be a business in that region, some years ago, and knows all about it; so I asked him what was the matter.

"There's been a panic," said he, "and the street hasn't got over it yet. Stocks have been knocked higher than a burnt boot!"

This eccentric statement explained to me the crowd, the feverish conversation, the eagerness of the atmosphere. Men who had been rich at breakfast time are penniless now. Men who had been penniless are suddenly rich. The juggernaut wheel of fortune had made a grand revolution, and many lame ducks were crawling from beneath its inexorable tide.

"Are you going into the outside board?" asked D. G.

As I was an outsider, I thought this must be my proper place whence to seek what a stock market is.

"You can't get in without some endorsement or authority," said D. G., but I guess I can get in on admission."

I asked him to do so, and he did. He procured a slip of paper, whereon was written a date, and a request to "admit the bearer and oblige." A tolerably well-known firm, D. G. told me that the man who gave him that paper, a moment after "I" that check for one hundred dollars had been "given out yet." The boy appeared to answer, "No, but that the note for sixty thousand dollars" had "just come in."

I, who do not believe in such sums generally, fancied the conversation to be improvised for the purpose of conveying an air of responsibility, on the part of the firm, to my friend. Possibly, these people wanted to borrow a dollar from him. Subsequently, I learned that this firm does a business involving millions.

Very few people know what is going on in the stock market region every day. I, for one, had not imagined anything like it. I had fancied that there were excited groups in Wall street, but I was wrong. William street is the centre of financial delusions, and the outside board, "as it is called, in contradistinction to the "regular board" is the very Babel and pandemonium of finance.

At three o'clock P. M., or thereabout, I entered the room where this pandemonium is daily held. The door-keeper took my pass and scrutinized it.

"That is good, isn't it?" I asked, innocently. He laughed, and turned to the next comer. The signature of a firm worth millions is rarely questioned in William street.

The room was large, dusky, dirty, and crowded. Plain wooden seats were arranged in a semi-circle—precisely like the benches of a concert saloon—around a place like a pulpit. In this stood an old gentleman, with grey hairs and whiskers, holding in one hand a ponderous mallet of rosewood, and in the other a bass drumstick. Behind him hung a small gong, and beside him sat a strange-looking, skeleton-like young man, with long hair and an account book.

The benches were full of men, all with their hats on, all anxious of expression. Rather a good-looking set generally, but with hideous exceptions. A vast number of them bore unmistakable traces of Hebrew origin. All those persons were anxiously looking at once, and the din of voices was unutterable. Several arose simultaneously in different places, and pointing at each other, radiantly, and shouting phrases that sounded like insults. I thought for a time that a free fight must inevitably result, till I found that they were merely trying to buy or sell stocks.

I cannot begin to repeat the mysterious formulae they uttered. It was all Greek to me, and worse. The main object seemed to be an increase of the confusion already reigning, and when ten or fifteen persons, young and old, Jew and Gentile, got to the highest pitch of their voices, yelling themselves purple in the face, the old gentleman in the pulpit added to the demoniac roar by beating studiously upon his gong with the drumstick, and his counter with the gong, crying "Order! Order, gentlemen!" as loud as any of them.

In the course of my varied studies of the human mind, and various excitements, I have penetrated to those unhallowed chambers devoted to the joyous but extensive games of faro and roulette. Likewise have I witnessed the playing of brag and poker, upon the turbid bosom of the Mississippi; but nowhere have I seen card gamblers who would for a moment have tolerated the undignified, the insane, the graceless and avaricious confusion that characterized this meeting of the outside board of stock brokers. With my idea of down-town business had been associated with some notions of respectability and quiet importance; but such notions are scattered forever. I can only remember this scene as a type of bedlamite financial debauchery, and flammy irretrievable. I instinctively buttoned my pockets—a somewhat needless precaution, perhaps, but an unscrutable avowal permeated the atmosphere, and I had vague fears of losing the coat off my back, my hat, my boots, my senses, anything and everything that I might possess.

There were many boys present, of ages from fourteen to twenty. Some of these bought and sold heavily, exhausting their shrill treble voices to a degree of hoarseness quite painful. Most of the youngsters, however, contented themselves with taking notes of the fluctuation in price of different stocks. Such were probably sent there by their employers for the purpose. I was told that they often acquire great skill in judging the market thus, and come out strong as brokers on their own account ere long. One such, known as "Little Charlie," was pointed out to me as knowing far more about stocks than his own players, of the firm of G. B. & Co.

The noise was so varied, and I do not see for the life of me, this sort of a thing can be endured more than a year without fatal results. I would not pursue it longer without some surer way of gaining a larger fortune than the majority ever gain. I passed out, then, only to find a still denser, noisier crowd surrounding the door steps. Men were darting in for a moment and returning with new quotations from the sales inside which they were offered stentoriously, offering to buy or sell to the thorough-bred—unhappy wretches who had not the key to those mysterious portals.

Trying to wedge my way through this,

It was therefore a relief for me to see my friend D. G. in the crowd. He used to be a business in that region, some years ago, and knows all about it; so I asked him what was the matter.

"There's been a panic," said he, "and the street hasn't got over it yet. Stocks have been knocked higher than a burnt boot!"

This eccentric statement explained to me the crowd, the feverish conversation, the eagerness of the atmosphere. Men who had been rich at breakfast time are penniless now. Men who had been penniless are suddenly rich. The juggernaut wheel of fortune had made a grand revolution, and many lame ducks were crawling from beneath its inexorable tide.

"Are you going into the outside board?" asked D. G.

As I was an outsider, I thought this must be my proper place whence to seek what a stock market is.

"You can't get in without some endorsement or authority," said D. G., but I guess I can get in on admission."

I asked him to do so, and he did. He procured a slip of paper, whereon was written a date, and a request to "admit the bearer and oblige." A tolerably well-known firm, D. G. told me that the man who gave him that paper, a moment after "I" that check for one hundred dollars had been "given out yet." The boy appeared to answer, "No, but that the note for sixty thousand dollars" had "just come in."

I, who do not believe in such sums generally, fancied the conversation to be improvised for the purpose of conveying an air of responsibility, on the part of the firm, to my friend. Possibly, these people wanted to borrow a dollar from him. Subsequently, I learned that this firm does a business involving millions.

Very few people know what is going on in the stock market region every day. I, for one, had not imagined anything like it. I had fancied that there were excited groups in Wall street, but I was wrong. William street is the centre of financial delusions, and the outside board, "as it is called, in contradistinction to the "regular board" is the very Babel and pandemonium of finance.

At three o'clock P. M., or thereabout, I entered the room where this pandemonium is daily held. The door-keeper took my pass and scrutinized it.

"That is good, isn't it?" I asked, innocently. He laughed, and turned to the next comer. The signature of a firm worth millions is rarely questioned in William street.

The room was large, dusky, dirty, and crowded. Plain wooden seats were arranged in a semi-circle—precisely like the benches of a concert saloon—around a place like a pulpit. In this stood an old gentleman, with grey hairs and whiskers, holding in one hand a ponderous mallet of rosewood, and in the other a bass drumstick. Behind him hung a small gong, and beside him sat a strange-looking, skeleton-like young man, with long hair and an account book.

The benches were full of men, all with their hats on, all anxious of expression. Rather a good-looking set generally, but with hideous exceptions. A vast number of them bore unmistakable traces of Hebrew origin. All those persons were anxiously looking at once, and the din of voices was unutterable. Several arose simultaneously in different places, and pointing at each other, radiantly, and shouting phrases that sounded like insults. I thought for a time that a free fight must inevitably result, till I found that they were merely trying to buy or sell stocks.

I cannot begin to repeat the mysterious formulae they uttered. It was all Greek to me, and worse. The main object seemed to be an increase of the confusion already reigning, and when ten or fifteen persons, young and old, Jew and Gentile, got to the highest pitch of their voices, yelling themselves purple in the face, the old gentleman in the pulpit added to the demoniac roar by beating studiously upon his gong with the drumstick, and his counter with the gong, crying "Order! Order, gentlemen!" as loud as any of them.

In the course of my varied studies of the human mind, and various excitements, I have penetrated to those unhallowed chambers devoted to the joyous but extensive games of faro and roulette. Likewise have I witnessed the playing of brag and poker, upon the turbid bosom of the Mississippi; but nowhere have I seen card gamblers who would for a moment have tolerated the undignified, the insane, the graceless and avaricious confusion that characterized this meeting of the outside board of stock brokers. With my idea of down-town business had been associated with some notions of respectability and quiet importance; but such notions are scattered forever. I can only remember this scene as a type of bedlamite financial debauchery, and flammy irretrievable. I instinctively buttoned my pockets—a somewhat needless precaution, perhaps, but an unscrutable avowal permeated the atmosphere, and I had vague fears of losing the coat off my back, my hat, my boots, my senses, anything and everything that I might possess.

There were many boys present, of ages from fourteen to twenty. Some of these bought and sold heavily, exhausting their shrill treble voices to a degree of hoarseness quite painful. Most of the youngsters, however, contented themselves with taking notes of the fluctuation in price of different stocks. Such were probably sent there by their employers for the purpose. I was told that they often acquire great skill in judging the market thus, and come out strong as brokers on their own account ere long. One such, known as "Little Charlie," was pointed out to me as knowing far more about stocks than his own players, of the firm of G. B. & Co.

The noise was so varied, and I do not see for the life of me, this sort of a thing can be endured more than a year without fatal results. I would not pursue it longer without some surer way of gaining a larger fortune than the majority ever gain. I passed out, then, only to find a still denser, noisier crowd surrounding the door steps. Men were darting in for a moment and returning with new quotations from the sales inside which they were offered stentoriously, offering to buy or sell to the thorough-bred—unhappy wretches who had not the key to those mysterious portals.

Trying to wedge my way through this,

THE GAMBLES' CARNIVAL.

[From the Round Table.]

One pleasant Saturday afternoon, I happened to be in William street, Exchange Place. There was a tremendous crowd there, and everybody seemed greatly excited. Large numbers of elegantly-dressed young gentlemen conversed feverishly on the curbside, and semi-respectable-looking old persons of the kind first called "buffs," but now called "bustards," stood with their hands in their pockets, and their eyes fixed on the street. Small boys with portfolios and case-books darted hither and thither. Sassy men, with nothing in their pockets save their hands, stood about listening to the talk of others with an eager dropping air. The atmosphere was charged with a magnetic equality quite new to me, and I was forcibly impressed with a sense that something had happened.

It was therefore a relief for me to see my friend D. G. in the crowd. He used to be a business in that region, some years ago, and knows all about it; so I asked him what was the matter.

"There's been a panic," said he, "and the street hasn't got over it yet. Stocks have been knocked higher than a burnt boot!"

This eccentric statement explained to me the crowd, the feverish conversation, the eagerness of the atmosphere. Men who had been rich at breakfast time are penniless now. Men who had been penniless are suddenly rich. The juggernaut wheel of fortune had made a grand revolution, and many lame ducks were crawling from beneath its inexorable tide.

"Are you going into the outside board?" asked D. G.

As I was an outsider, I thought this must be my proper place whence to seek what a stock market is.

"You can't get in without some endorsement or authority," said D. G., but I guess I can get in on admission."

I asked him to do so, and he did. He procured a slip of paper, whereon was written a date, and a request to "admit the bearer and oblige." A tolerably well-known firm, D. G. told me that the man who gave him that paper, a moment after "I" that check for one hundred dollars had been "given out yet." The boy appeared to answer, "No, but that the note for sixty thousand dollars" had "just come in."

I, who do not believe in such sums generally, fancied the conversation to be improvised for the purpose of conveying an air of responsibility, on the part of the firm, to my friend. Possibly, these people wanted to borrow a dollar from him. Subsequently, I learned that this firm does a business involving millions.

Very few people know what is going on in the stock market region every day. I, for one, had not imagined anything like it. I had fancied that there were excited groups in Wall street, but I was wrong. William street is the centre of financial delusions, and the outside board, "as it is called, in contradistinction to the "regular board" is the very Babel and pandemonium of finance.

At three o'clock P. M., or thereabout, I entered the room where this pandemonium is daily held. The door-keeper took my pass and scrutinized it.

"That is good, isn't it?" I asked, innocently. He laughed, and turned to the next comer. The signature of a firm worth millions is rarely questioned in William street.

The room was large, dusky, dirty, and crowded. Plain wooden seats were arranged in a semi-circle—precisely like the benches of a concert saloon—around a place like a pulpit. In this stood an old gentleman, with grey hairs and whiskers, holding in one hand a ponderous mallet of rosewood, and in the other a bass drumstick. Behind him hung a small gong, and beside him sat a strange-looking, skeleton-like young man, with long hair and an account book.

The benches were full of men, all with their hats on, all anxious of expression. Rather a good-looking set generally, but with hideous exceptions. A vast number of them bore unmistakable traces of Hebrew origin. All those persons were anxiously looking at once, and the din of voices was unutterable. Several arose simultaneously in different places, and pointing at each other, radiantly, and shouting phrases that sounded like insults. I thought for a time that a free fight must inevitably result, till I found that they were merely trying to buy or sell stocks.

I cannot begin to repeat the mysterious formulae they uttered. It was all Greek to me, and worse. The main object seemed to be an increase of the confusion already reigning, and when ten or fifteen persons, young and old, Jew and Gentile, got to the highest pitch of their voices, yelling themselves purple in the face, the old gentleman in the pulpit added to the demoniac roar by beating studiously upon his gong with the drumstick, and his counter with the gong, crying "Order! Order, gentlemen!" as loud as any of them.

In the course of my varied studies of the human mind, and various excitements, I have penetrated to those unhallowed chambers devoted to the joyous but extensive games of faro and roulette. Likewise have I witnessed the playing of brag and poker, upon the turbid bosom of the Mississippi; but nowhere have I seen card gamblers who would for a moment have tolerated the undignified, the insane, the graceless and avaricious confusion that characterized this meeting of the outside board of stock brokers. With my idea of down-town business had been associated with some notions of respectability and quiet importance; but such notions are scattered forever. I can only remember this scene as a type of bedlamite financial debauchery, and flammy irretrievable. I instinctively buttoned my pockets—a somewhat needless precaution, perhaps, but an unscrutable avowal permeated the atmosphere, and I had vague fears of losing the coat off my back, my hat, my boots, my senses, anything and everything that I might possess.

There were many boys present, of ages from fourteen to twenty. Some of these bought and sold heavily, exhausting their shrill treble voices to a degree of hoarseness quite painful. Most of the youngsters, however, contented themselves with taking notes of the fluctuation in price of different stocks. Such were probably sent there by their employers for the purpose. I was told that they often acquire great skill in judging the market thus, and come out strong as brokers on their own account ere long. One such, known as "Little Charlie," was pointed out to me as knowing far more about stocks than his own players, of the firm of G. B. & Co.

The noise was so varied, and I do not see for the life of me, this sort of a thing can be endured more than a year without fatal results. I would not pursue it longer without some surer way of gaining a larger fortune than the majority ever gain. I passed out, then, only to find a still denser, noisier crowd surrounding the door steps. Men were darting in for a moment and returning with new quotations from the sales inside which they were offered stentoriously, offering to buy or sell to the thorough-bred—unhappy wretches who had not the key to those mysterious portals.

Trying to wedge my way through this, dense mass of humanity, I was accosted by a young man of good humored appearance, who asked me if it was "going hard or soft inside?" Not quite comprehending the phrase, I said I thought it was. I sincerely hope that he sold no valuable stock on that statement.

THE GAMBLES' CARNIVAL.

[From the Round Table.]

One pleasant Saturday afternoon, I happened to be in William street, Exchange Place. There was a tremendous crowd there, and everybody seemed greatly excited. Large numbers of elegantly-dressed young gentlemen conversed feverishly on the curbside, and semi-respectable-looking old persons of the kind first called "buffs," but now called "bustards," stood with their hands in their pockets, and their eyes fixed on the street. Small boys with portfolios and case-books darted hither and thither. Sassy men, with nothing in their pockets save their hands, stood about listening to the talk of others with an eager dropping air. The atmosphere was charged with a magnetic equality quite new to me, and I was forcibly impressed with a sense that something had happened.

Crossing over to Delmonico's close at hand, I found many of those gigantic gamblers refreshing the inner man with strange and stimulating compounds. An acquaintance whom I met there told me I could pick up thousands of dollars' worth of information, if I wished to "toperate," by simply listening about. I am not averse to thousands of dollars, so I acted upon his suggestion, and heard a stout man say, Hubble and Squawk is fetching a thirty-six, buyer ten." To which a thin man replied, "Don't see it, no how. I've made a corner in Smasher and Sling-wheel." "I'm going to sell short on Persimmon Valley," remarked another. At this moment I became bewildered and unhappy. I had the information, but saw nothing of the thousands of dollars, so I came away, determined to adhere to the present to my legitimate profession.

Janesville Daily Gazette.

TUESDAY, JUNE 14, 1864.

For President,
ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice-President,
ANDREW JOHNSON,
OF TENNESSEE.

How the Nominations Take.

It was well known before the Baltimore Convention met that the first choice of the people was Abraham Lincoln. This had been expressed through the press, through the state legislature and by state conventions in almost every state not in rebellion against the government. Now that the National Convention has responded to this almost unanimous request of the people, it is of little significance to quote the expressions of joy and satisfaction with which the nomination has been received throughout the country; but it is not inappropriate to note the manner in which prominent and influential journals that were known to be hostile to Mr. Lincoln's re-nomination, have acquiesced in this fiat of the people. The New York Tribune was the most active and out-spoken of the papers which openly labored to secure the nomination of some other man, but having labored in vain, Mr. Greeley is too good a patriot and too wise a man to place himself in a hostile attitude to the best interests and legitimately expressed wish of his party, and in this case, of the country also. In an article on the nominations the day after they were made, Mr. Greeley writes as follows:

"The Union National Convention yesterday, presented, with entire unanimity, the name of Abraham Lincoln as candidate for re-election for the Presidency of the United States. This nomination is in unquestionable accord with public sentiment in all its manifestations."

After giving the reasons which induced it to prefer another candidate, it says:

"All this is of the past. The will of a great majority of the Unionists has been heard, and it says: 'Let us have Abraham Lincoln as our President for another term.' We bow to their decision, and ardently hope that the result may vindicate their sagacity and prove our apprehensions unfounded."

Another paper unfriendly to Mr. Lincoln's re-nomination, was the Missouri Democrat, the organ of the radicals in that State and one of the soundest and ablest papers in the country. An ardent friend of Fremont from the start, it was expected by the adherents of that gentleman that it would lead off in his support. But not so. It speaks of the action of the Baltimore convention in this wise:

"The will of the people has been heard and obeyed at Baltimore, in the adoption of a substantially radical platform; a unanimous and cordial welcome of the radicals of Missouri; an emphatic excommunication of the conservative faction of the country; a pointed and scathing rebuke of the fossilism and 'old fogeyism' in the National Cabinet, and the nomination of an eminent radical statesman for Vice President."

We can designate points in which we would have amended the action of the convention. The nomination of Grant, Butler or Chase would have pleased us better than that of Mr. Lincoln. But it is now our plain duty, which we except with cheerfulness and intend to discharge to our best ability, to seek the re-election of the fairly designated nominee of the Unionists of the country, and to carry to a triumphant conclusion the radical policy to which he is committed."

So it is everywhere. Our delegates at Baltimore did exactly what the people sent them there to do, both as to candidates and platform, and they intend to ratify their action at the polls in November. There will be no split in the Union ranks this year.

The Last Words of COLONEL STONE.—Much has been said—but not too much in praise of Colonel Newton Stone, late commander of the Vermont 2d, who fell in the second day's fight in the Wilderness. He was first wounded in the forehead and conveyed to the rear, and after having his wound dressed, requested to be placed upon his horse, which was done, when he immediately rode to the front and took his position at the head of his regiment amid the cheers of his men, whom he addressed briefly as follows:

"Well, boys, this is rough work, but I have done as I told you I wished you to do, not to leave for a slight wound, but remain just as long as you could do any good; I am here to do as long as I can."

He then rode along the line, speaking a word of good cheer to every company, and as he halted to address company B, a rifle ball pierced his head, and he fell from his horse a corpse. At that moment the regiment was forced back and the body of their Colonel was captured, but was immediately retaken.—Springfield Union.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

LEE WOODEN.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into the two great Armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee, were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

Special Notices.

REMOVAL!
Dr. M. B. JOHNSON has removed to Jackson & Smith's New Building, over the Rock County Bank, where he will wait upon his friends and customers in any department of dentistry. 660day

REMOVAL!
Dr. B. L. BENDERSON has removed his Dental Rooms to the new block of Jenkins & Dewey, first floor over the shoe store of Cyrus Miner, where he will attend to all the calls in his profession. 660day

NERVOUS DISEASES
AND PHYSICAL DEBILITY, arising from specific causes, in both sexes,—now and reliable treatment, in reports of the HOWARD ASSOCIATION—sent in sealed envelopes, free of charge. Address, Dr. J. SKILLIN HOUGHTON, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth street, Philadelphia, Pa. 647day

COLGATE'S HONEY SOAP.
This celebrated Toilet Soap, in such universal demand, is made from the choicest materials, is mild and emollient in its nature, fragrant, scented, and extremely beneficial in its action upon the skin. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers. Jan28day

<

THE GAMBLER'S CARNIVAL.

One pleasant Saturday afternoon, I happened to be in William street, Exchange Place. There was a tremendous crowd there, and everybody seemed greatly excited. Large numbers of elegantly-dressed young gentlemen conversed feverishly on the curbstones, and some respectable-looking old persons of the kind infrequently met in the middle of the street. Small hawk-like portulacas and "cheese-boxes and cheese-boxes" darted hither and thither. Seedy men, with nothing in their pockets save their hands, stood about listening to the talk of others with an air of dropping air. The atmosphere was charged with a magnetic equality quite new to me, and I was forcibly impressed with a sense that something had happened.

It was therefore a relief for me to see my friend D. O. in the crowd. He used to do business in that region, some years ago, and knows all about it; so I asked him what was the matter.

"There's been a panic," said he, "and the street hasn't got over it yet. Stocks have been knocked higher than a burnt boot!"

This eccentric statement explained to me the crowd, the forthright conversation, the magnetic air of the atmosphere. Men who had been rich at breakfast time are penniless now. Men who had been penniless are suddenly rich. The Juggernaut wheel of fortune had made a grand revolution, and many lame ducks were crawling from beneath its inexorable tire.

"Are you going into the outside board?" asked D. G.

As I was an outsider, I thought this must be my proper place whence to seek what a stock market is.

"I should like to do so," I said. "You can't get in without some endorsement of authority," said D. G., but I guess I can get you an admission."

I asked him to do so, and he did. He procured a slip of paper, whereon was written a date, and a request to "admit the bearer and obligee" to a tolerably well-known firm. D. G. told me that the man who gave him that pass asked a moment after, if "that check for one hundred dollars" had been "given out yet."

The boy appeared to answer, "No, but that the note for sixty thousand dollars" had "just come in."

I, who do not believe in such sums generally, fancied the conversation to be improvised for the purpose of conveying an air of responsibility, on the part of the firm, to my friend. Possibly, these people wanted to borrow a dollar from him. Subsequently, I learned that this firm does a business involving millions.

Very few people know what is going on in the stock market region every day. I, for one, had not imagined anything like it. I had fancied that the "outside board" groups in Wall street, but I was wrong. William street is the centre of financial delusions, and the "outside board," as it is called, in contradistinction to the "regular board," is the very Babel and pandemonium of finance.

At three o'clock p. m., or thereabout, I entered the room where this pandemonium is daily held. The door-keeper took my pass and scrutinized it.

"That is good, isn't it?" I asked, innocently. He laughed, and turned to the next comer. The signature of a firm worth millions is rarely questioned in William street.

The room was large, dusky, dirty, and crowded. Plain wooden seats were arranged in a semi-circle—precisely like the benches of a concert saloon—around a place like a pulpit. In this stood an old gentleman, with grey hairs and whiskers, holding in one hand a ponderous mallet of rosewood, and in the other a bass drumstick. Behind him hung a small gong, and beside him sat a strange-looking, skeleton-like young man, with long hair and an account book.

The benches were full of men, all with their hats on, all anxious of expression. Rather a good-looking set generally, but with hideous exceptions. A vast number of them bore unmistakable traces of Hebrew origin. All those persons were vociferously taking at once, and the din of voices was unsupportable. Several arose simultaneously in their places, and pointing at each other vindictively, and shouting phrases that sounded like insults. I thought for a time that a free fight must inevitably result, till I found that they were merely trying to buy or sell stocks.

I cannot begin to repeat the mysterious formula they uttered. It was all Greek to me, and worse. The main object seemed to be an increase of the confusion already reigning, and when ten or fifteen persons, young and old, Jew and Gentile, got to the highest pitch of their voices, yelling themselves purple, in the face, the old gentleman in the pulpit added to the demagogue roar by beating furiously upon his gong with the drumstick, and his counter with the gavel, trying "Order! Order, gentlemen!" as loud as any of them.

In the course of my varied studies of the human being, under various expositions, I have penetrated to those unallowable chambers devoted to the joyous but expensive games of faro and roulette. Likewise have I witnessed the playing of brag and poker, upon the turbid bosom of the Mississippi; but nowhere have I seen card gamblers who would for a moment have tolerated the undignified, the insane, the graceless and avicious confusion that characterized this meeting of the outside board of stock brokers. Hitherto my idea of down-town business had been associated with some notions of respectability and quiet importance; but such notions are shattered forever.

It seems as if a type of bodilime financial debauchery, and hummering irretrievable inactivity I buttoned my pockets—no, somewhat needless precaution, perhaps, but an unscrutable aversion permeated the atmosphere, and I had vague fears of losing the coat off my back, my hat, my boots, my senses, anything and everything that I might possess.

There were many boys present, of ages from fourteen to twenty. Some of these bought and sold heavily, exhausting their shrill treble voices to a degree of hoarseness quite painful. Most of the youngsters, however, contented themselves with taking notes of the fluctuation in price of different stocks. Such were probably sent there by their employers for the purpose.

I was told that they often acquire great skill in judging the market thus, and some at times as brokers on their own account long. One such known as "Little Charlie," was pointed out to me as knowing far more about stocks than his employers, of the firm of G. B. & Co.

The noise soon wearied me. I do not see, for the life of me, how this sort of a thing can be endured more than a year without fatal results. I would not pursue it longer without some surety of gaining a larger fortune than the majority ever find. I passed out, then, only to find a still denser, noisier crowd surrounding the door steps. Men were darting in for a moment and returning with new quotations from the sales inside which they vociferated stentoriously, offering to buy or sell the thorough-bred—unhappy wretches—who had not the key to those mysterious portals.

Trying to wedge my way through this

THE GAMBLER'S CARNIVAL.

One pleasant Saturday afternoon, I happened to be in William street, Exchange Place. There was a tremendous crowd there, and everybody seemed greatly excited. Large numbers of elegantly-dressed young gentlemen conversed feverishly on the curbstones, and some respectable-looking old persons of the kind infrequently met in the middle of the street. Small hawk-like portulacas and "cheese-boxes and cheese-boxes" darted hither and thither. Seedy men, with nothing in their pockets save their hands, stood about listening to the talk of others with an air of dropping air. The atmosphere was charged with a magnetic equality quite new to me, and I was forcibly impressed with a sense that something had happened.

It was therefore a relief for me to see my friend D. O. in the crowd. He used to do business in that region, some years ago, and knows all about it; so I asked him what was the matter.

"There's been a panic," said he, "and the street hasn't got over it yet. Stocks have been knocked higher than a burnt boot!"

This eccentric statement explained to me the crowd, the forthright conversation, the magnetic air of the atmosphere. Men who had been rich at breakfast time are penniless now. Men who had been penniless are suddenly rich. The Juggernaut wheel of fortune had made a grand revolution, and many lame ducks were crawling from beneath its inexorable tire.

"Are you going into the outside board?" asked D. G.

As I was an outsider, I thought this must be my proper place whence to seek what a stock market is.

"I should like to do so," I said. "You can't get in without some endorsement of authority," said D. G., but I guess I can get you an admission."

I asked him to do so, and he did. He procured a slip of paper, whereon was written a date, and a request to "admit the bearer and obligee" to a tolerably well-known firm. D. G. told me that the man who gave him that pass asked a moment after, if "that check for one hundred dollars" had been "given out yet."

The boy appeared to answer, "No, but that the note for sixty thousand dollars" had "just come in."

I, who do not believe in such sums generally, fancied the conversation to be improvised for the purpose of conveying an air of responsibility, on the part of the firm, to my friend. Possibly, these people wanted to borrow a dollar from him. Subsequently, I learned that this firm does a business involving millions.

Very few people know what is going on in the stock market region every day. I, for one, had not imagined anything like it. I had fancied that the "outside board" groups in Wall street, but I was wrong. William street is the centre of financial delusions, and the "outside board," as it is called, in contradistinction to the "regular board," is the very Babel and pandemonium of finance.

At three o'clock p. m., or thereabout, I entered the room where this pandemonium is daily held. The door-keeper took my pass and scrutinized it.

"That is good, isn't it?" I asked, innocently. He laughed, and turned to the next comer. The signature of a firm worth millions is rarely questioned in William street.

The room was large, dusky, dirty, and crowded. Plain wooden seats were arranged in a semi-circle—precisely like the benches of a concert saloon—around a place like a pulpit. In this stood an old gentleman, with grey hairs and whiskers, holding in one hand a ponderous mallet of rosewood, and in the other a bass drumstick. Behind him hung a small gong, and beside him sat a strange-looking, skeleton-like young man, with long hair and an account book.

The benches were full of men, all with their hats on, all anxious of expression. Rather a good-looking set generally, but with hideous exceptions. A vast number of them bore unmistakable traces of Hebrew origin. All those persons were vociferously taking at once, and the din of voices was unsupportable. Several arose simultaneously in their places, and pointing at each other vindictively, and shouting phrases that sounded like insults. I thought for a time that a free fight must inevitably result, till I found that they were merely trying to buy or sell stocks.

I cannot begin to repeat the mysterious formula they uttered. It was all Greek to me, and worse. The main object seemed to be an increase of the confusion already reigning, and when ten or fifteen persons, young and old, Jew and Gentile, got to the highest pitch of their voices, yelling themselves purple, in the face, the old gentleman in the pulpit added to the demagogue roar by beating furiously upon his gong with the drumstick, and his counter with the gavel, trying "Order! Order, gentlemen!" as loud as any of them.

In the course of my varied studies of the human being, under various expositions, I have penetrated to those unallowable chambers devoted to the joyous but expensive games of faro and roulette. Likewise have I witnessed the playing of brag and poker, upon the turbid bosom of the Mississippi; but nowhere have I seen card gamblers who would for a moment have tolerated the undignified, the insane, the graceless and avicious confusion that characterized this meeting of the outside board of stock brokers. Hitherto my idea of down-town business had been associated with some notions of respectability and quiet importance; but such notions are shattered forever.

It seems as if a type of bodilime financial debauchery, and hummering irretrievable inactivity I buttoned my pockets—no, somewhat needless precaution, perhaps, but an unscrutable aversion permeated the atmosphere, and I had vague fears of losing the coat off my back, my hat, my boots, my senses, anything and everything that I might possess.

There were many boys present, of ages from fourteen to twenty. Some of these bought and sold heavily, exhausting their shrill treble voices to a degree of hoarseness quite painful. Most of the youngsters, however, contented themselves with taking notes of the fluctuation in price of different stocks. Such were probably sent there by their employers for the purpose.

I was told that they often acquire great skill in judging the market thus, and some at times as brokers on their own account long. One such known as "Little Charlie," was pointed out to me as knowing far more about stocks than his employers, of the firm of G. B. & Co.

The noise soon wearied me. I do not see, for the life of me, how this sort of a thing can be endured more than a year without fatal results. I would not pursue it longer without some surety of gaining a larger fortune than the majority ever find. I passed out, then, only to find a still denser, noisier crowd surrounding the door steps. Men were darting in for a moment and returning with new quotations from the sales inside which they vociferated stentoriously, offering to buy or sell the thorough-bred—unhappy wretches—who had not the key to those mysterious portals.

Trying to wedge my way through this

Special Notices.

REMOVAL!
Dr. M. B. JOHNSON, has removed to Jackson's New Building, over the Book County Bank, where he will wait upon his friends and customers in any department of dentistry. J. B. JOHNSON

REMOVAL!
Dr. J. P. PENDLETON has removed his Dental Rooms to the new block of Jenkins & Dwyer, first door on the southeast corner of Oyster Minner, where he will attend to all the calls in his profession. J. P. PENDLETON

NERVOUS DISEASES
AND PHYSICAL DEBILITY, arising from specific causes, in both sexes, now and reliable treatment, in reports of the HOWARD ASSOCIATION—sent in sealed letter envelopes, free of charge. Address, Dr. J. SKILLIN HOUGHTON, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth street, Philadelphia, Pa. "Star" Advertiser

COLGATE'S HONEY SOAP.
This celebrated Toilet Soap, in such universal demand, is made from the choicest materials, is mild and emollient in its nature, fragrant, scented, and extremely beneficial in its action upon the skin. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers. J. B. JOHNSON

HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM.
This is the most delightful and extraordinary article ever discovered. It changes the most sordid face and hair, to a purely sea texture of ravishing beauty, imparting the marvellous purity of youth and the distinctive appearance appearing in the healthy state of fashion. It removes tan, freckles, pimples, and roughness from the skin, leaving the complexion fresh, transparent and smooth. It contains no material injurious to the skin. Discounted by Druggists and Open Signers. "Star" Advertiser

HAIR DYE! HAIR DYE!
HAGAN'S CELEBRATED HAIR DYE is the best in the world! The only Hair Dye, True and Reliable Dye known. This splendid Hair Dye is perfect—changes Red, Rusty, or Gray Hair, instantly to a Glossy Black or Natural Brown, without injuring the hair or staining the skin, leaving the hair soft and beautiful, imparts fresh vitality, frequently restoring the natural color, and giving the full effect of youth. The genuine is signed WILLIAM A. HAGAN, all others are more hazardous, and should be avoided. Sold by all Druggists, etc. Factory, 311 BANCART ST., N. Y. BANCART'S NEW TONIC CREAM for Dyeing the Hair. J. B. JOHNSON

HEINSTRUP'S INIMITABLE HAIR RESTORATIVE.
It is not a DYE, but restores gray hair to its original color, by supplying the capillary tubes with natural nutriment impaired by age or disease. All instantaneous dyes are composed of harsh caustic, destroying the vitality and beauty of the hair, and afford of themselves no drawing. Heinstrup's Inimitable Coloring not only restores hair to its natural color by an easy process, but gives the hair a luxuriant beauty, promotes its growth, prevents its falling off, eradicates dandruff, and imparts health and pleasantness to the head. It has been the best of time being the original Hair Coloring, and is constantly increasing in favor. Used by both gentlemen and ladies. It is sold by all respectable dealers, or can be procured by direct from the commercial agent, Dr. B. BARNES & CO., 202 Broadway, New York. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1. J. B. JOHNSON

WYNKOOP'S ICELAND PECTORAL.
Diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Pulmonary Organs are never permanent, insidious and dangerous. The properties of a medicine to relieve, cure, and protect those complaints, must be expectant, analgesic and invigorating, loosening the mucus of the throat, and imparting tone to the entire system. No discovery in medical science ever restored this class of diseases like Dr. Wynkoop's Iceland Pectoral. It is used with the most astonishing results in all cases of Bronchitis, Tracheitis, Whooping Cough, Diphtheria or Parotid Gland Swelling, Asthma, Croup, Congestive Cough, Nervous Irritability, etc. The Rev. J. J. Porter certifies—"I have used Dr. Wynkoop's Pectoral for several years, myself and in my family, for severe pulmonary complaints, and have recommended it to many others, and have never seen its equal." Rev. J. J. Porter, Brooklyn, N. Y. Hundreds of testimonials of important testimonials could be printed, showing its remarkable cures and that it never fails. It is composed of pure Iceland Moss, Balm of Gilead, Licorice, Marsh-Mallows, and other valuable ingredients. It is harmless, prompt and lasting. Invalids and sufferers cannot afford to neglect a cure so sure and so easily obtained. It is recommended for Croup. Full descriptions, recommendations and directions accompany each bottle. Sold by all the principal Druggists. Prepared by Dr. R. D. WYNKOOP, and sold by Dr. B. BARNES & CO., New York. J. B. JOHNSON

PHENIX INSURANCE CO., HARTFORD, CONN.
The Kind of Insurance Worth Having!
On the morning of the 23d of February, the brick house occupied by the "Star" and "Advertiser" in Lafayette street, was burned to the ground. The property was insured for $50,000 on the above premises and machinery of the "Star" and "Advertiser" the loss was covered by the Phoenix Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn. The Phoenix Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn. is the only insurance company in the country; a pointed and scathing rebuke of the fossilism and "old fogyism" in the National Cabinet, and the nomination of an eminent radical statesman for Vice President.

"We can designate points in which we would have amended the action of the convention. The nomination of Grant, Butler or Chase would have pleased us better than that of Mr. Lincoln. But it is now our plain duty, which we exempt with cheerfulness and intend to discharge to our best ability, to seek the re-election of the fairly designated nominee of the Unionists of the country, and to carry to a triumphant conclusion the radical policy to which he is committed."

So it is everywhere. Our delegates at Baltimore did exactly what the people sent them there to do, both as to candidates and platform, and they intend to ratify their action at the polls in November. There will be no split in the Union ranks this year.

THE LAST WORDS OF COLONEL STONE.
Much has been said—but not too much in praise of Colonel Newton Stone, late commander of the Vermont 2d, who fell in the second day's fight in the wilderness. He was first wounded in the leg and conveyed to the rear, and after having his wound dressed, requested to be placed upon his horse, which was done, when he immediately rode to the front and took his position at the head of his regiment amid the cheers of his men, whom he addressed briefly as follows:

"Well, boys, this is rough work, but I have done as I told you I wished you to do, not to leave for a slight wound, but remain just as long as you could do any good; I am here to do as long as I can. I am then rode along the line, speaking a word of good cheer to every company, and as he halted to address company B, a rifle ball pierced his head, and he fell from his horse a corpse. At that moment the regiment was forced back and the body of their Colonel was captured, but was immediately retaken.—Springfield Union.

LEE WOUNDED.—A party of boys at Detroit, last Friday began to "play war." They separated themselves into two great armies of Virginia and began to fight the battles of the Wilderness. Two leaders of the opposing hosts, Grant and Lee were armed with pistols. In the heat and high excitement of the conflict, Grant recklessly and patriotically discharged his weapon. The ball took effect in Lee's leg, wounding him badly. He was taken to the hospital, and is feared it may be necessary to amputate the ambitious youth's leg.

Dry Goods.

SUMMER TRADE NOW OPENED.
At the
NEW YORK CASH STORE.
A NEW ORDER OF TRADE
MERCHANDISE
Cheaper in Janesville
THAN IN NEW YORK.

All kinds of merchandise has advanced from 25 to 50 per cent.

In the Eastern Markets
In the past two weeks, and still advancing every day. In addition to our immense stock bought early in March, we have been receiving in the past month

Very Large Additions to our stock of
ALL KINDS OF MERCHANDISE
for the SUMMER TRADE,
and notwithstanding the

THE VERY LARGE ADVANCE
in all kinds of merchandise in the past few weeks in the Eastern markets, we shall continue

FOR THE NEXT THIRTY DAYS to sell our GOODS AT OLD PRICES! which is at least

Twenty Per Cent. Below the present Eastern jobbing prices.
SMITH & BOSTWICK,
Janesville, June 10, 1861.

MILLINERY!
The subscribers have opened a shop,
Three Doors East of Philadelphia Drugstore on West Milwaukee street, up stairs, where they design keeping

A Full, General and Complete
MILLINERY GOODS!
Our goods are now, just having been purchased in Boston. We think they will GIVE PERFECT SATISFACTION.

Call and See Them.
J. B. JOHNSON

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
Know all men by these presents, that

HOPKINS & SMITH
have taken the law brick shop recently erected by J. B. JOHNSON, and are prepared to do painting in all its branches. Particular attention paid to

SIGN PAINTING!
Graining, Gliding, Paper Hanging, Carriage Work, Window Shades, &c.
Remember the place,
New Brick Block of McKee & Bro.,
opposite Schuyler House, 121st St., Janesville, Wis.
All orders promptly attended to.
C. W. HOPKINS W. L. SMITH

ASSESSOR'S NOTICE.
I hereby give notice that the undersigned are now ready to receive the lists of Personal Property in this city. All persons owning any personal property, or who claim an exemption from the assessment of 1861 will please send in to the office of the City Treasurer, and all persons claiming personal property will have to file their list at the same place. J. B. JOHNSON

RECEIVED THIS DAY BY EXPRESS
from McKee & Bro.,
3000 new style Ladies' Masses and Children's Hats.
200 pieces new style of Spring and Summer Dress Goods.
200 new style Paris Cloaks.
400 the most modern in the market of Shavies, moccasins which are real Indian. Shavies, something new in the market, to which we call the particular attention of the ladies.
J. B. JOHNSON

NEW CARPETS RECEIVED AT
McKee & Bro.—We have just received 100 packages of CARPETS, all cloth and China carpets; purchased two months ago before the advance.
We now offer 20 packages Bright's Havana Carpet, at 25 to 30 cents per yard less than New York City prices of this date.
J. B. JOHNSON

FARMERS' MILL! THE SUBscribers have completed extensive repairs in said mill, and are prepared to do Better Work and Give Better Yield!

In Oconomowoc grinding than any other mill in the county

BEST FAMILY FLOUR & MILL FEED constantly on hand, and delivered free of charge to any part of the city.
JACKMAN & ALDEN.

FOR SALE—160 Acres of Good
Farming Land, half mile south of the village of Janesville, in the county of Rock, containing 160 acres and out buildings. One-half (1/2) the above land, with or without improvements. Terms very easy. Enquire of J. B. JOHNSON or Bennett, Oconomowoc & Friends.
J. B. JOHNSON

WRITING PAPER & Envelopes
—$1000 can be saved the people of Janesville by purchasing their stationery at
J. B. JOHNSON

Miscellaneous.

BLACK SILK CIRCULARS.
ELEGANT STYLES.
THE VERY BEST MATERIAL.
THE FINEST MANNER.

Ladies' Cloth Circulars
AND SACQUES,
all colors, just received by

RICE, GAUL & RICE.
SUMMER SHAWLS.
We have just received some of the

Handsome Summer Shawls over brought to this market, consisting of styles in

MOZAMBIQUE, SILK AND WOOL, BANGE, THIBET, STELLA, ALL WOOL, BROCHE, &c., &c., &c., which goods we are offering at the

VERY-SMALLEST PROFITS.
RICE, GAUL & RICE.
Gray's Patent Molded

PAPER COLLARS,
The best fitting and most comfortable collar made, in all sizes,
CARROTE AND TURN-OVER.
ALSO,

SCARFS, NECKTIES, GLOVES,
HOSIERY, &c., &c., at
RICE, GAUL & RICE.
J. B. JOHNSON

NEW-SPRING GOODS!
NOW READY
—AT—ECHLIN & POORE'S
English, French, Scotch and American.

Cloth Cassimeres & Vesting!
Offered at the

NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON!
and in fact

THE LARGEST AND BEST
STOCK OF GOODS
ever exhibited to the citizens of Janesville.

THE SPRING STYLES!
—ARE—
New and Beautiful!! and we have all the facilities for doing the very best of work at the lowest possible prices.
J. B. JOHNSON

MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD.
GREAT CENTRAL ROUTE
New York, New England, and the Canada.

On and after Sunday, Nov. 15th, 1861, trains leave the Great Central Union Depot, foot of Lake street, at 6:20 a. m., Sundays excepted. Arrive Detroit 6:30 p. m.; Toronto 4:15 a. m.; Suspension Bridge 4:30 a. m.; Buffalo 4:45 a. m.; Albany 6:45 p. m.; New York 8:30 p. m.; Boston 12:30 a. m.

6:30 p. m., Sundays excepted. Arrive Detroit 6:00 a. m.; Toronto 4:45 p. m.; Suspension Bridge 4:45 p. m.; Buffalo 6:00 p. m.; Albany 6:45 a. m.; New York 1:30 p. m.; Boston 4:00 p. m.

Tuesday, Saturday and Sundays excepted. Arrive Detroit 10:00 a. m.; Toronto 9:05 a. m.; Suspension Bridge 9:10 a. m.; Albany 9:40 a. m.; New York 2:45 p. m.; Boston 5:00 p. m.

The Chicago p. m. train leaves Chicago 7:30 a. m. and arrives at Janesville without change of cars or baggage. Return's Palace, Yorkville and Waukegan Arrives Janesville on all cars of this Company.

An Elegant Smoking Car, with Turkish, Indian, and Italian beds, and other day train.

2000 Sleeping Cars on night trains.

Through Tickets for sale at all the principal railroad offices in the west at the General Office, corner 1st and Dearborn streets, near the Tremont House, Chicago, and at the Depot. R. N. RICE, Gen'l Sup't.

IMPORTANT TO THE PUBLIC.
Notice: standing the 60 per cent. additional duty put on imported goods within the last two weeks, and also the action in some of our banks offering currency but national and local tender notes, we are determined to sell our entire stock of Imported Goods at old prices, and also to take all New England, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota currency, until further notice. Respectfully Yours,
J. B. JOHNSON

TO THE LADIES—Foreign and American Extractions of the finest varieties. Prepared for the Hair, Toilet Soap, &c., at reasonable prices, at the
J. B. JOHNSON

Miscellaneous.

J. A. DENNELL.
REGULATING THE WATER CURE
No. 1, 3rd Street, Janesville, Wis.

JUST RECEIVED a fine assortment of

SILVER WARE, consisting of

CASTORS, CAKE BASKETS, TEA SETS, SPOON HOLDERS, NAPKIN RINGS, and all kinds of Silver Ware that you will find in a

FIRST CLASS JEWELRY STORE.
Agent for the celebrated

CALENDAR CLOCK.
A good assortment of Calendar Clocks from $2 up to $50. Particular attention paid to repairing Watches, Clocks and Jewels, by myself.

GIVE ME A CALL,
and if I don't suit you I will not cost you anything.
JOHN A. DENNELL,
No. 1, 3rd Street, Janesville, Wis.

WOOLEN FACTORY.
Janesville, Wis.

The subscriber at the Factory known as the

"STONE MILLS,"
on the Monterey Water Power, has two sets of wide machinery in full operation, and is now putting in the third set, making it the Largest Mill in the Northwest;

about three times as large as the other Factories in the State.

Having a large establishment, he is enabled to employ better workmen, to produce better quality and with more promptness, and offer to customers better facilities than any other mill in the Northwest. Those who have used the cloth made at this mill, will be glad to hear that the cloth is now being put out without any delay. If any other testimony were needed, the following from the Chicago Tribune, of November 24th, 1860, might be added:

"The trade in woollen goods is now unusually brisk, and rarely if ever have we seen such a large and varied stock in a single establishment. The goods are of the best quality, and are domestic manufacture, and quite a large assortment of Western goods are offered. Some of the best plain customers in the market are manufacturers—not in England, nor France, nor even in the Eastern States—but in Wisconsin and in several portions of the State, Indiana and Ohio. The goods are exhibited by their agents, Brown Bros., of this city, who deserve special mention because of the excellence of every particular, and because we consider it our duty as a journalist to aid and foster home manufactures."

Customers may rely upon having their work done promptly, and from June 1st to Sept. 15th at the following extremely low rates.

TERMS OF EXCHANGE:
For 1/2 lbs. of wool a yard of Jeans, Twined or Union Casimers.
For 1 1/2 lbs. of wool a yard of Satinette or Flannel.
For 2 lbs. of wool a yard of Casimers, either plain or fancy.

PRICES FOR MANUFACTURING:
40 lbs. or more of wool, from 15 to 25 cents per yard, according to the kind of cloth made.
Rust Coloring, where the bundles are 15 lbs. or more, 4 cents.
Clean Dressing of all kinds done from 10 to 20 cents per yard.

Persons living at a distance can send their wool by Railroad or by Express, with full directions, and have their wool or cloth promptly returned to them. A good assortment of CLOTHS for sale 25 per cent lower than they can be bought at any other place in town.
J. B. JOHNSON

GRAND TRUNK AND VERMONT CENTRAL Railway Line All Right.

Passengers going West will make sure connections with this line by taking either the Michigan Central, Michigan Southern, Detroit and Grand Haven routes. No change of cars from Chicago to Berlin.

Only one change between Chicago and Buffalo. Two between Chicago and Boston. If going the Vermont Central from Newburgh; and two between Chicago and New York.

Grand Trunk Line of Steamers.
A Steamer of this Line will leave Milwaukee every morning and Chicago every evening, connecting with the Grand Trunk Railway at Berlin. The time by the line will be Two Days. Quick! Eastern points than any other lake and Rail Route.

Fare, First Class, including State Rooms:
Buffalo.....$ 5.00
Toronto.....$ 5.00
Ogdensburg.....$ 5.00
Oswego.....$ 5.00
Syracuse.....$ 5.00
Rochester.....$ 5.00
Syracuse.....$ 5.00
Albany.....$ 5.00
Montreal.....$ 5.00

